The Speaker focused on highlighting the role of geographical concept of map making in the study of environment and disaster management; as maps provide visual representation of spatial data, they enable one to understand the complex relationships between environment, natural resources and potential hazards.

Some key applications of map making used in order to study environment and disaster management were discussed by the Speaker. These include:

- Environmental Impact Assessment: Utilizing maps to identify sensitive ecological areas, endangered species-habitats and other environmental features, assess impact of development projects, thereby helping planners and policymakers to minimize adverse effects and mitigate risks.
- Land Use Planning: Maps aid in land use planning by appropriate siting of infrastructure development, urban expansion, by depicting current land cover, land ownership as well as zoning regulations, prevalent environmental factors and conservation issues in the area.
- Emergency Response and Recovery: During disasters, maps play a vital role in emergency response and coordinating rescue operations, assessing damage, locating affected populations, recovery efforts and planning the distribution of resources and aid.

The address by the Speaker was followed by a stimulating interactive discussion session with the students who clarified their concepts, shared their doubts and experiences and were illuminated and enriched by the Speaker's explanations and detailed Example-oriented response associated to real World and local daily events, to which the students could relate directly.

KeyConcept

The global Covid-19 has hit the Indian economy at a time when growth has slowed to the lowest in a decade. In the recent past, there were signs of green shoots of recovery in the Indian economy. However, the impending outbreak of the virus is likely to severely impact the recovery process. The government and regulators have responded by providing an economic stimulus package with several measures to shore up liquidity and provide forbearance on several financial and compliance commitments. The pandemic is impacting the financial services sector in multiple ways– from business continuity issues and operational considerations to the overall financial outlook. In this respect Financial Institutions need to plan for a multiple scenario till operations are normalized keeping both their customers as well as employees needs at the centre of their businesses. Under these circumstances this webinar is an attempt to assess the potential impact of the shock on various sectors of Indian finance market and Indian economy and put forward a set of policy recommendations for specific sectors.
